Transitions are proud milestones for some and lifetime stigma for others; hence it is paramount that parents help to make it a success for every P6 child who would enter the secondary school for another four/five years of their lives by first understanding the traits of a typical teenager in Singapore and what could be the challenges of their next steps. Parents are their child’s first teachers and as the child grows into a teenager, their emotional needs are different and the role of parents being a teacher may have to transform to that of an emotional coach with the right communication skills.

GUEST SPEAKER: PAMELA CHONG

Pamela Chong has a strong calling to impact lives and is experienced in training and coaching pre-school, primary and secondary students in life skills, leadership, team-building and brain-based learning. With a heart for guiding young children and youths, Pamela focuses on helping them build positive self-esteem and resilient character. She also pours a large part of her energy into leading and mentoring more than 100 youths in her church. Understanding the importance and need to nurture social advocacy in our youths, she has planned and led youths on community service expeditions in several countries in the region. Her work encourages youths to be active and contributing members to society.

LEAD TRAINER

Pamela Chong has a strong calling to impact lives and is experienced in training and coaching pre-school, primary and secondary students in life skills, leadership, team-building and brain-based learning.

With a heart for guiding young children and youths, Pamela focuses on helping them build positive self-esteem and resilient character. She also pours a large part of her energy into leading and mentoring more than 100 youths in her church.

Understanding the importance and need to nurture social advocacy in our youths, she has planned and led youths on community service expeditions in several countries in the region. Her work encourages youths to be active and contributing members to society.

Overcoming setbacks, disappointments and challenges in her journey of transforming lives, Pamela’s sincere effort has helped many youths break out of their comfort zone and limiting beliefs, and brought hope and direction into their lives.

Passionate about performing arts, she believes in drama as a powerful and interesting tool for reaching out to the masses. She connects this with her dynamic and joyful training style to make learning come alive for her participants, while effectively imparting values and honing their communication skills.

She has received special commendation from Paya Lebar Methodist Girls’ School (Secondary) and Woodlands Ring Secondary School for nurturing positive and tangible improvements in the lives of the students she trained.
